

Swimming against the tide is no easy task. This is why I want to thank, first and foremost, my loving parents, Linda Basel Kwet and Fred Kwet, for their support over the years. We are from a middle class background. Without their gracious and ongoing financial and emotional support, I wouldn't have been able to survive as an academic to this point. I also want to thank my friends, too numerous to list. Some of them include Sohrob Kazerounian, Jonathan Oronzo, Itumeleng Moabi, Grace Nyambosi, Sanele Khakhu, Thabo Motshweni, and my kind and loving dog, Lily Kwet. I want to give special thanks my mother, Linda Basel Kwet, for her daily conversations with me about the topic, as well as Agnes Oberauer, who reviewed the manuscript in detail with outstanding feedback. Last but not least, I want to thank the Centre for Social Change at the University of Johannesburg for supporting this work, as well as Pluto Press for bringing the book to publication.

People are rebelling against injustice across the world. I hope this book can add some clarity to the struggle and inspire even more rebellion. Now is the time.
